COLLAPSES TWICE TELLING HER STORY

Mrs. Mary A. Burns Takes Witness Stand But Unable to Stand Strain--Witnesses Testify as to Her Sanity

Mrs. Mary A. Burns, who is on trial for the poisoning of her husband, Frank A. Burns at Nottingham on Dec. 22, 1914, was the principal figure at today's hearing and added intensity to the dramatic situation by collapsing twice on the witness stand while giving the events leading up to the death of her husband.

At 11:45, after Mrs. Burns had been on the witness stand a half hour she began to weep violently and soon collapsed, necessitating the court taking a recess of fifteen minutes.

Again at 12:30, when telling the story of what occurred on the morning of her husband's death, Mrs. Burns collapsed and Chief Justice Pike ordered a recess taken until 1:45 this afternoon.

Frank Watson of Nottingham was the first witness called. He testified that Mrs. Burns came in his store the Monday before Mr. Burns died and telephoned to Welch's at Raymond. "I used to see her clipping up and down the road. I think it was crazy jealousy, as she thought Burns was after other women."

George Letendre of Norwich, Conn., testified that he was a hotel keeper having hotels at Norwich and Webster Mass. He had gone to the jail this morning and identified Mrs. Burns as the woman that was at the Durfee Inn at Webster in the Spring of 1914. "I recognized the picture of Mrs. Burns in a Boston newspaper and after reading the account of the trial I wrote to Col. Bartlett."

She came to me one night about 12 and said that Mrs. Lawyer was hugging her husband, Mr. Burns, in the bath room. I went to their room and found both Mr. and Mrs. Lawyer in bed. At the time I found that Mr. Burns was in his room.

She also wanted me to discharge a young woman named May Robinson, who was upstairs flirting with her husband in the bath room. Miss Robinson was in the dining room at the time. She wanted me to call up the postoffice in Worcester to see if they had seen Mr. Burns. She said she had consulted a clairvoyant in Worcester, who told her that Mr. Burns was out walking on the streets of Worcester with a woman and she would never see him again.

Mrs. Burns paid the bills while at the hotel.

It was an everyday occurrence to see her up nights walking up and down the corridors mumbling and rambling about Frank being with other women. She became so bad that I finally requested her to leave the hotel. I have seen her sitting in the room with her arms around Mr. Burns' neck and on one or two occasions she asked me if I did not want my fortune told.

On one or two occasions I found Mr. Burns locked in his room. She was in constant fear of losing her husband and continually harped on Frank. The five or six weeks that Mr. Burns was at the hotel he did not do any work. I tried to get him a job on the Grand Trunk railroad.

On cross examination:

She asked me several times if a dark complexioned woman from Worcester had been there to see Mr. Burns. She acted queer during her stay at the hotel and the help called her a crazy woman. When she was on the street, she walked fast and people of the town frequently asked me who the woman was that lived at the hotel with the tall man. She complained about every day that her room was not warm, and on going to the room I found that it was all right. I did not see her dress book. She said she had one and could tell by it and the dice what would transpire. The second day after Burns went away she said:

"Mr. Letendre I can see Mr. Burns walking on the streets of Worcester with a dark complexioned woman."

Fred Morrison of Nottingham testified to Mrs. Burns calling at his house at 4:30 on the morning of December 22 and asking him to call the doctor as her husband was awfully sick.

Fred A. Welch, livery stable keeper of Raymond testified to receiving a telephone the afternoon before Burns died to come over and get her for the 6 o'clock train. I told her that the driving was so bad I could not send a team.

Fred A. Huxley of Raymond, employed by Mr. Welch testified to getting word the night before from his employer to take Mrs. Burns to the train in the morning. I went as directed but was told that Mrs. Burns was not going owing to the death of her husband.

Mrs. Annie Burgess of Nottingham testified to Mrs. Burns coming to her house to hire a room.

Warren M. Gerrish of Nottingham testified to meeting Mrs. Burns, who asked him if he ever saw her husband riding with any other woman. Mr. Burns was working for Mr. Webb at that time driving a team. From her appearance it looked as though there was something that was not just right.

Rev. Percy W. Caswell, pastor of the Court Street Christian church testified to first meeting Mrs. Burns in the jail on Sunday, January 30, in answer to

INCREASE FORCE AT MUNITION PLANT

Office Organization Being Refined—Heavy Shipment of Freight.

Everybody was on the move at the plant of the New England Steel and Ordnance Co. at Freehan's Point this morning, and a considerable increase was made in the working force. The contractors who have started work increased their forces and there were some additions made to the office crew. The office force is rapidly being organized and a number of new clerks have been taken on recently. Douglas McLean, who has been officer at the Portsmouth and Colonial Theatres for some time, has taken the position of night watchman in the office.

The company secured a valuable man in J. N. Wentworth, formerly assistant road master of the Boston & Maine railroad, who has been placed in charge of the tracks and equipment at the plant. The company has ordered an electric locomotive and this will do all the shifting off the main line.

There is a considerable increase in freight for the plant and several cars of lumber and machinery arrived today.

The company is getting ready for the installation of the machinery as fast as is possible and this is being turned out for them at their plant in Vermont. This past week they picked up two large lathes in this city, one from the Portsmouth Motor Mart and the other from Elmer Glass.

It is understood that the plant here is one of eleven in the giant combination for the manufacture of munitions of war, and that more plants are to be taken over in time.

Chief Engineer Plase passed Saturday in Boston and attended the Harvard and Yale game.

SYNOPSIS.

On the day of the eruption of Mount Pelée Capt. John Hardin of the steamer Princess rescues five-year-old Annette Hington from an open boat, but is forced to leave her father and his companions. Hington is associated by Hernandez and Ponto in a vain attempt to send aboard the Princess with his daughter, papers proving his title to and telling the whereabouts of the lost island of Chinabur. Hington's injury causes his mind to become a blank. Fifteen years elapse. Hernandez, now an opium smuggler, with Ponto, a female accomplice, and the hideous brute that once was Hington, come to Esparto, where the widow of Captain Hardin is living with her son Neal and Anette. Hington and Ponto steal the papers left to Anette by her father. Neal tries for admission to the Naval academy, but through the treachery of Joey Wheeler is defeated by Joey and disgraced. Neal enlists in the navy. Ponto sells a trap for Joey and the conspirators get him in their power. Anette discovers that heat applied to the map reveals the location of the lost island. In a struggle for possession of the map, Hernandez and Neal each secure a portion. Anette sails on the Coronado in search of her father. The gray mutiny and are overcome by a boarding party from U. S. Destroyer Jackson, led by Neal in Martinique. Anette and Neal are captured, but are rescued by a sponge diver. Hernandez identifies papers for himself as Anette. In an instruction Neal and Anette are again captured, carried to the Sun City and Anette is offered as a sacrifice to the sun god. They are rescued by natives from the Albany. Landed in Tortuga, Anette and Neal are captured and exposed to yellow fever infection by Hernandez, but are rescued by sailors from the Albany. Neal tries to rob Anette and escapes. On her way to Chinabur Anette is captured. Neal is promoted and leads a party of transferred men toward Chinabur, but is caught in a train wreck on the way.

At a half run Ponto and the brute started across the desert, dodging here and there behind little hillocks of sand. Finally the village was cut off from their sight.

"Now we can run," Ponto cried, "make haste."

No sooner had he spoken than his foot slipped—he sank into the ground up to his waist.

"Help," he cried, "a quicksand—help."

The brute pulled him back to terra firma. But it was not a quicksand, as Ponto soon found out. It was a trap—a trap for jaguars.

Ponto shivered. Then he replaced the dried brush and grass and earth. Nimbly he climbed into one of the overhanging trees. Then he slid down, nodding to himself with satisfaction.

"She must pass within a hundred yards of this place to reach the mission," he exclaimed, "Easte, we wait here until she comes."

Down in the village, at the little old hotel, Anette ordered out two horses. "I can't wait," she told her foster mother, Mrs. Hardin. "There's no use talking to me. I've got to go."

Anette started for the mission. Half way there two figures darted out from behind a hillock, and one of them seized her bridle and brought her steed to a standstill. Terror-stricken, Anette saw that the two were Ponto and the brute—two of the band of desperadoes whom she feared.

"Drag her off her horse," commanded Ponto of the brute. The brute obeyed. Ponto gave the horse a cut with the whip and the horse ambled off toward town.

At his command the brute carried Anette across the desert, totally oblivious to her struggles and outcries. Ponto led the way, stopping from time to time to make pleasant remarks to Anette.

By this time they had reached the small, damp, dank oasis with its shading palms and its little pool of water. Ponto led the way into the very depths of this inviting green shelter. Then he struck the brute on the shoulder.

"Now set her down," he commanded. The brute obeyed. Anette gasped with surprise. She was not bound—she was free, untrammelled.

"What are you going to do with me?" queried Anette.

"Nothing, senorita," returned Ponto, bowing low.

Anette, wary, fearful, looked behind her as though she expected an attack from the rear. But there was no one to be seen. Beyond was the desert—there seemed to be no hiding places.

Ponto merely bowed again. "Senorita," he said, with a leer, "beauty in distress—ah me!—it touches my heart always. See, the mission lies yonder—behind you. Your path lies there. You are free."

Anette turned. Keeping her glance over her shoulder, to be ready for treachery, she slowly proceeded on her way.

Suddenly, without warning, she sank into the pit.

Ponto laughed in glee. "The stakes—they are like knives," he cried—they are deadly—they are for jaguars—and little white helms—ah, yes—"

With a cry, Anette found herself falling helplessly into the unknown terror underneath.

"Help—help—help," she cried.

With a bound the brute was upon her. He darted to the very edge of the pit, and with the surefootedness of an animal crouched there, throwing its entire body forward and catching her by the shoulders just as she disappeared from sight. He drew her back to terra firma. No sooner had he done so, however, than Ponto was upon them both, knife in hand, his teeth literally gnashing with rage.

He lurched a savage knife-thrust at the brute—and missed. Then he threw himself upon Anette and half tore her in his frenzy from the brute's grasp, cutting and slashing at them both with his wicked knife.

"I've got you now, you little wildcat," he panted in guttural Spanish, "down you go."

He thrust her savagely into the pit. Once more the brute caught her—and in so doing swung the three of them around, so that their positions were reversed. Ponto, throwing caution to the winds, kept lunging at the two with his sharp weapon.

"I'll get you both," he yelled, "I'll get you both."

A moment later he was clawing at the air—but it was too late. Making frantic struggle to preserve his balance, he tumbled over backward. There was the crash of a heavy body falling—a tearing, thudding sound—a ghastly, hideous scream—then silence.

CHAPTER LI.

The Jaguar's Mate.

A lieutenant from the battleship Missouri clapped Neal on the shoulder.

"Well," he said, "ensign, we're still following your girl. Pleasant occupation for you, eh?"

"Looks as if I'd do it all my life," said Neal, "but some day I hope to catch up to her."

The officers were in charge of a small squad of men who had landed at Santa Maria in Lower California, under orders from Washington, and under advice from the United States district attorney in California. They were on the track of a coal station—the United States wanted to make a treaty with a girl. The girl was here—somewhere.

"Hello," said Neal, "look. There's a horse—a riderless horse. Go on, boys—get it, double quick."

Three of the squad caught the horse and brought it to Neal.

"A woman's saddle," said Neal. His heart was in his throat. "Look." He drew from the pommel an object that had caught there—one of a pair of woman's gloves.

"Anette's," he cried, "something has happened."

"Forward, double quick," commanded the lieutenant. "We'll see."

At the hotel they found Mrs. Hardin and Joe, gazing anxiously out toward the mission. Neal caught his mother by the arm.

"Anette," he cried, "we caught her horse. Where is she?"

They told the story of her starting out.

"Not a moment to lose," exclaimed Neal, "come on boys—hurry all you can."

Meantime at the mission, Hernandez and Inez—with full confidence in Ponto's ability to delay the advent of Anette—had once more presented themselves before Brother Anselmo.

"We have been patient, father," said Hernandez, "and we trust that prayer—and sleep—have given you wisdom and enlightenment, and satisfied you of the justice of our claim."

"Ah, you speak truth, son," said Brother Anselmo. He rose and left the room, returning immediately with the iron box containing the documents in question. He set it down upon the table.

There was a hubbub outside in the courtyard. In the midst of it a door was thrust open, and the brute strode in, carrying Anette in his arms—Anette, still only semiconscious—still suffering from the shock of that withering figure at the bottom of the jaguar trap back there in the desert. "Some instinct had led the brute back to his master. He laid the figure of Anette upon the table with the air of one who has done his duty well.

"Brothers," cried Brother Anselmo, seeing Anette's plight, "quick—restoratives—succor for this young girl." Hernandez took advantage of the confusion—though he himself was confused beyond all peradventure. "Listen," he said to Inez, "leave her with the brute—go at once. I'll do the rest."

Unnoticed, Inez and the brute played. They left the room, hurried across the courtyard and disappeared. Hernandez watched them go. His coolness returned. Swiftly, with one bound, he was upon Brother Anselmo and had seized the iron box in his iron grasp.

In an instant he was across the room.

But Brother Anselmo had done something more than pray and sleep in his quiet existence. He was an active, well-trained individual. With a loud cry he leaped across the intervening space, and bounded upon the shoulders of Hernandez.

"Help, help, brothers," he commanded.

There was help plenty. Hernandez fought like a madman, but the brothers clung to him like leeches. Slowly, however, he worked his way toward the nearest exit—and then with a mighty wrench, he threw off all his assailants including Brother Anselmo, went on, slowly, puzzled, "but not yet have I solved the mystery of the eyes of that big man—the eyes—"

He stopped again. "For the eyes of Annette Hington were riveted upon him."

NO DISORDER AT MILL OPENING

Only 500 Strikers Return to Work in Nashua Mills.

(Special to The Herald)

Nashua, Nov. 22.—Under guard of two full companies of militia and some three hundred regular and special policemen, on duty about the streets, the mills of the Nashua Manufacturing Co. and the Jackson Manufacturing Co. reopened today following a six weeks' shut down as a result of the textile strike. Five hundred of the 3000 retained to work and there was no disorder. Thomas McMahon, an organizer of the Textile Union, issued a statement saying that there would be no disorder and he was on hand when the mills opened to see that the men kept their word. At three meetings of the strikers held Sunday, attended by 2500 strikers, a unanimous vote not to return to work was passed.

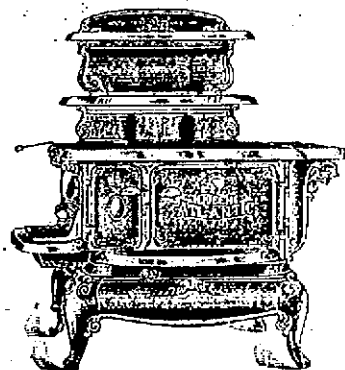

The mills opened on a 44-hour schedule and at the time of the strike they were running 56 hours a week.

VON HINDENBURG IN RETREAT AT RIGA

Kaiser's Forces Meet Reverses Near Important Railroad Supply Line-- Italians Win Big Mountain Battle After Bombardment of Austrian Position

Petrograd, Sunday.—West of Dvinsk the Russians have initiated a serious reverse on the German troops near the line of the Ponevezh railway, the most important line, next to the Vilna Dvinsk railway, that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has on this front.

At the same time a violent artillery fire has been resumed on the Riga front, where the Russians have forced a German retreat of several miles through the swamps and now are driving forward into the open country to the westward.

Every effort is being made to prevent the German digging in for the winter in favorable positions before Dvinsk and Riga. In the attack on the German works near the Ponevezh railway the enemy was forced to abandon his trenches, leaving them filled with arms, munitions, and T-entire dead.

Tear Recaptures Styk Positions
General von Linsinger's army on the river Styk, which succeeded in pressing the Russians back near Czartorysk has also met with defeat. Attacking the enemy on the left bank of the stream, the Russians have recaptured the town of Czartorysk and the village of Kozlinitz, a short distance to the north.

The Russian front in the Caucasus apparently has been strengthened and frequent outpost actions from the Black Sea to Lake Van show that the Russian forces are establishing contact again in force with the enemy. Russian aviators have been active on this front bombarding Turkish encampments near Khorasan and Koprakeul.

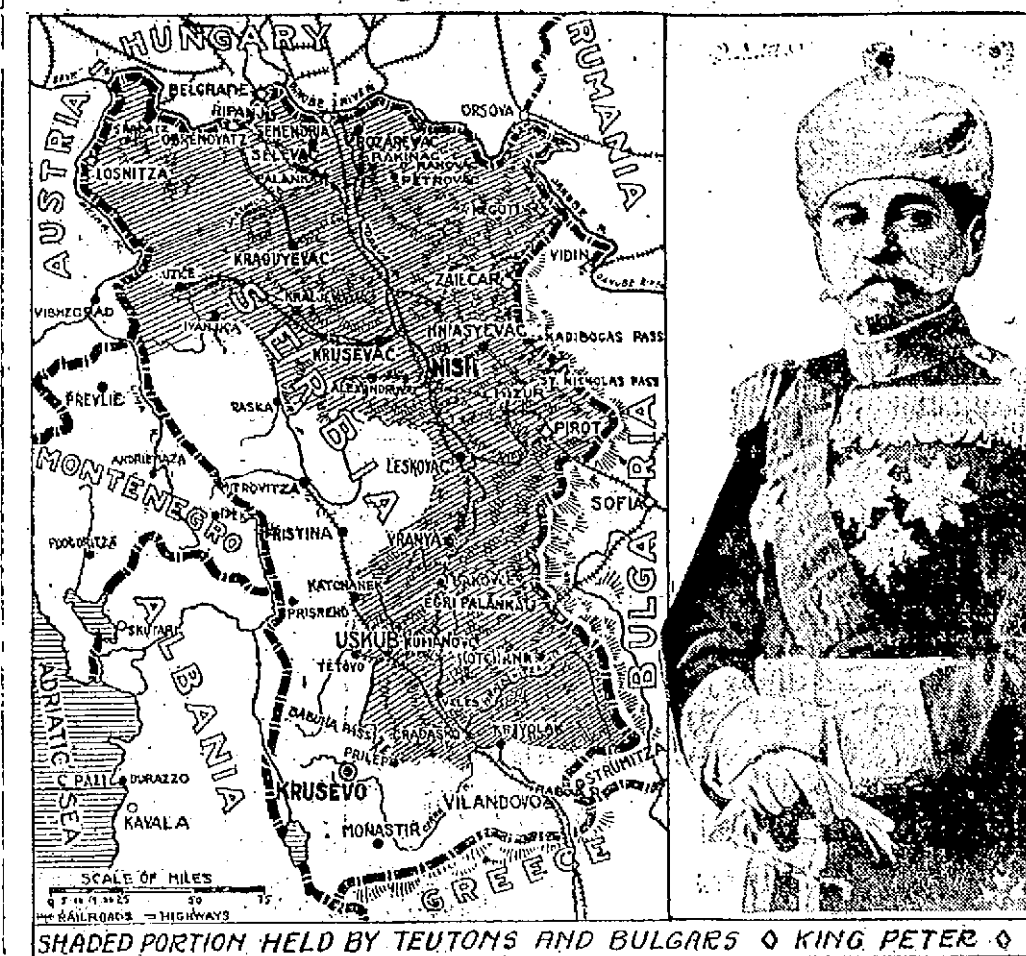

ABLE TO PRODUCE RADIUM AT ONE-THIRD PRESENT COST

Washington, Nov. 21.—Secretary of the Interior Lane yesterday, through the Bureau of Mines, made public the methods whereby the bureau has been able to produce radium for less than one-third its present selling price. The cost of radium at the Denver Experiment station of the bureau, including the higher cost of the first experimental work was $37,000 for each gram of radium metal. The market price of radium for the last two or three years, according to the Bureau of Mines, has been from $120,000 to $100,000 per gram.

"The result of the ability of the Bureau of Mines to produce radium for $37,000 a gram," said Secretary Lane, "has at least made it possible for two great hospitals in the country to obtain a good supply of radium for use in the treatment of cancer, that dreadful disease that is costing the lives of 75,000 human beings every year in the United States. Up to the present time, five grams of radium have been extracted from the carnotite ores and about half of it has been delivered in finished form to the Kelly Sanitarium in Baltimore and to the Memorial Hospital in New York.

"The application of radium in the treatment of cancer and other malignant growths has made much more rapid progress in the last two years than is generally appreciated even by the medical profession. All kinds of opinions may be easily had from the laity and from cancer experts, and the public can draw almost any conclusion from the statements appearing in the newspapers, but preference should be given to the opinions of those persons who have had extended experience in the use of radium in sufficient quantities to enable them to speak authoritatively.

AS IN BELGIUM, MOST OF SERBIA IS NOW OCCUPIED BY ENEMIES.

Following the rapid advance of the Teutons from the north and northwest and of the Bulgarians from the north and east, Serbia, which was constituted before the first and second Balkan wars, and now Serbia, as it was enlarged at the expense of Turkey, is now held by the invading enemy. The main Serbian army, under General Putnik, which has been operating in the north, has been encompassed on every side but one and, being cut off from the south by the Bulgarian advance beyond Tetovo, must depend upon the rough roads for supplies from the sea. In the south the Serbian position is almost as bad. The success of the Bulgarians' flanking attack on Bulgaria gave and their advance from Velen have prevented the hoped for success of the Serbian and French forces. This left the Serbians only two lines of retreat, one into Albania, where they may be harassed by friendly tribes, and the other across the Greek border, where they were in danger of being disarmed and interned. It was to prevent the latter eventually that the entente powers put forth every effort.

"One thing regarding radium therapy that has been developed is that if the gamma rays of radium are to be successfully applied to the cure of cancer, a much larger quantity of radium must be used than is possessed by not more than two or three individual surgeons or hospitals in the United States. I know of no individual or hospital that has had the privilege of working with as much as half a gram of radium that does not report cures in increasing number or that is not able to treat even advanced cases, with increasing success as a knowledge of technique is developed. The extent and variety of cures reported and the helpful effects of the gamma rays at depth are almost in direct proportion to the quantity of radium that can be applied at one time to the patient. I do not mean that radium in comparatively small amounts may not be effective with some forms of cancer or some malignant growths in their incipency, but in two American hospitals that have a half a gram of radium or more, results are being obtained daily that unquestionably will not be duplicated elsewhere. Physicians and surgeons who do not have this much radium have no right to criticize or condemn the physicians who have more and who are obtaining results.

"At the time the bureau began its radium investigations, the miners and prospectors in Colorado and Utah, who were engaged in the mining of carnotite ore, were receiving between $75 and $80 a ton for their ore, this price being for the ore delivered in New York for shipment to Europe. The ore was being sent abroad in quantity and was not being treated in this country, although one or two companies were rapidly purchasing from prospectors claims at $50 to $200 and thereby laying the foundation of a future, possible monopoly in this rare material. It was hoped that methods could be found that would enable miners and associations of miners to extract the radium from their own ores, place it on the market, and obtain profits that had been going to foreign manufacturers. By August, 1914, when the European war came on, carnotite ore was selling for more than twice the price that had been obtained in the summer of 1912, this being undoubtedly due to the Bureau of Mines calling attention to the situation as it existed at the beginning.

"At this time, there were sixteen to twenty grams of radium contracted for abroad, chiefly in Germany, at prices above $120,000 a gram. Scarcely the war has not affected the market price but simply the amount produced.

"As to the selling price of radium in the future, the Bureau of Mines makes no prediction, but it does not follow that the selling price will decline because of the cheaper methods of production. The situation is somewhat analogous to the production of gold, diamonds or any other material that is in steady demand but occurs only in small quantities. Beyond doubt, the amount of radium in nature is exceedingly small. Other deposits of radium ore may be found, but it is highly improbable that the past rarity of radium ores will be greatly modified, so that the price of the radium will largely depend on the ability to procure the raw material.

"According to the best evidence that the Bureau of Mines can obtain, there is not sufficient ore available to maintain for many more years the rate of production in 1914.

"When this radium work was taken up, it was the desire of the department to show beyond doubt that, if authorized by Congress, the radium could be procured from ores then owned by the people at a cost approximating one third the market price, and that it was much better policy for the Government to obtain the radium so greatly needed in the hospitals of the Army, Navy, and Public Health Service at this low cost than to give these ores to large corporations and then purchase as radium material that had belonged to the people, at a price insuring large profits to the possessors. Unfortunately, the bill introduced into Congress in 1914, which would have accomplished this purpose, failed to pass and in the meantime the carnotite areas have been thoroughly prospected and the most valuable claims located. Accordingly we must be content with the good that may come to the American people through the radium being extracted in the plant of the National Radium Institute until such time as the Government may furnish funds sufficient to enable it to purchase in the open market such ore as may be necessary to supplement the little that remains unlocated on Government land.

"The report of the bureau on this new and cheaper method of producing radium from carnotite ores is highly technical in its character and will only interest those chemists who are engaged on such work. The methods devised are entirely new and differ from former methods not only in detail but in apparatus used. The time of operation is much shorter than in any other plant now producing radium and the commercial commercial recovery is much greater. Furthermore, it is believed that the cost of production is less than that in any method used heretofore. It should be remembered, however, that the methods apply solely to the treatment of carnotite ore and are not necessarily applicable to pitchblende or autunite. The methods of extracting the radium that have been evolved may be utilized under intelligent technical control by any firm, association, or corporation that can obtain the raw material. Although being patented for the benefit of the people, the processes may be used freely by anyone within the United States.

BOXING NOTES

At Freeman's hall this evening the Rockingham A. A. has a meeting and three good bouts are promised for the entertainment of the fans. Kid Sims, formerly of the U. S. S. Southern, arrived in Portsmouth on Saturday, looking fit to go against the best of them. He said that he had been training hard for this evening's mill with Tommy Harding and from outside appearances he looks as though he will do it.

Sims is boxing in Philadelphia on Thursday evening against one of the good ones in the quaker city, but states that he doesn't intend to let that interfere with his action tonight. Jim Savage of the U. S. S. Nebraska now stationed in Boston, arrived last evening and Dugan and Johnson, both of the U. S. S. Tennessee are in the pink of condition. The bouts should prove interesting and fast and a good house is expected.

WISE WORDS A Physician on Food.

A western physician has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying, that, in my own experience and also from personal observation, I have found no food to equal Grape-Nuts and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefit this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach, especially at breakfast to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream; and I think it is necessary not to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is voluntary on my part without any request for it."

FLEET SUBMARINES TO BE LARGE SHIPS

Will Exceed Destroyers In Size and Will Mount Disappearing Guns for Surface Action

Washington, Nov. 21.—The two new fleet submarines, bids for which will soon be advertised by the Navy Department, will exceed the Schley, now the world's largest under-water craft so far as is known, by 300 tons in displacement. They will be 1300-ton craft on the surface as against the Schley's 1000 tons, and exceed by 200 tons the biggest of the cruiser destroyers of the navy.

Congress gave navy designers a hard task when it said that these two new fleet submarines should have a surface speed of 25 knots an hour "if possible." The Schley will be a 20-knot boat when completed, and will have more than 4000 horsepower, furnished by heavy oil engines. Experiments in the navy's model basin with models of the new craft show that they will require between $800 and 10,000 horsepower to make the addition of five knots.

No internal combustion engines to go in the space available and furnish the power required could be found for the boats and the specifications to be advertised will propose vessels fitted with steam turbines for surface work, although similar storage battery and electric motor installation as in smaller craft will be used below the surface. Navy experts have worked out a practical solution to the mechanical obstacles in the way of using steam and have no doubt of its success. The boilers will be fired with oil fuel.

A novel arrangement has been developed for ordinary surface cruising whereby one of the twin turbines will do all of the work, the second shaft being operated by electricity. When high speed is required both turbines will be used.

The boats will be fitted with motor generators operating on pinion gears of the turbines. When the turbines are working they will generate electricity for the storage batteries; beneath the surface electricity will flow back from the batteries to the generators, which then become motors to drive the propeller shafts.

The peculiarity of the construction, however, lies in the fact that when the boat is cruising one turbine will drive one propeller shaft and also its own generator. Current from the generator will pass directly to its fellow on the other shaft, converting the second generator into a motor which will in turn drive the second shaft. In this way the full efficiency is obtained from the single turbine and economy of fuel consumption is secured.

The boats will mount disappearing guns for surface action, the new four-

Portsmouth, N. H., Monday, November 22, 1915.

Time for Resolute Action.

The increase in the number of bad automobile accidents—many of them fatal—is rousing the public to the need of remedial measures for the protection of life and limb in city streets and on country highways. Too many of these accidents, though by no means all of them, are caused by recklessness on the part of drivers. Pedestrians are responsible for some of them, but this does not obliterate the fact that there are too many drunken and reckless drivers who must be checked in their mad careers if there is to be reasonable safety on the public thoroughfares.

The Massachusetts Legislature will be asked at its coming session to enact a law which should materially abate the evil in that state. There has already been filed with the secretary of state a bill providing very stiff penalties for offending automobile drivers. The penalty for running away after hitting a person would be a fine of from $100 to $1,000 and imprisonment from three months to three years, or both. In civil cases the fact that the driver ran away would treble the amount of the damages. In case of the death of a victim the driver running away would be liable to imprisonment for from ten to twenty years. A driver convicted of drunkenness while driving would suffer the suspension of his license for the first offense, and if convicted again within two years his license would be permanently revoked.

This proposed law has not yet been enacted, but that it is proposed shows that people are awakening to the seriousness of the situation. And that the situation is serious and rapidly becoming more so is beyond all question. One of the most grievous developments is the growing practice on the part of auto drivers of running away after doing damage. Reports of this detestable act are published almost daily, and it is one that should be stopped if there is power in the law to stop it.

The fact that the majority of drivers are disposed to be careful does not shield the public from danger at the hands of the dastards who rush through city streets and over the highways with utter indifference to the rights of others, and even to their own safety. With these high-powered and swift machines there is danger enough when the utmost care is exercised, and there must be regulation that will regulate if there is to be anything like reasonable safety on the public thoroughfares. The legislature of every state should take the matter in hand with a seriousness commensurate with that of the condition that exists.

In these stirring days not much thought is given to the past, but there are those who remember that men have lived and died before who should not be forgotten. The Daughters of the American Revolution have erected suitable headstones at the original graves of Daniel Boone and his wife, and now Virginia Pearson, an actress, has organized a campaign to raise $10,000 with which to erect a fitting memorial over the neglected grave of one of America's immortal poets, Edgar Allan Poe. Such deeds are worthy, and those who undertake them are worthy of all necessary assistance.

In descending on the difference between men who use their minds and those who don't a Philadelphia paper tells of a man who as a coal worker saw the need of something to separate the coal from the slate and invented a machine that does this automatically. But there are many consumers laboring under the conviction that their coal never went through such a machine, or that the machine was badly out or order at the time.

Senator Jim Ham Lewis calls attention to a flaw in the president's preparedness plan that should not be overlooked. It fails to point out where the money is to come from. The financing of this job will be a very important part of the business.

Senator Borah, who is listed as among the presidential possibilities on the republican side, comes out flat-footed for national prohibition. It is a bold stand, but it is a commendable thing in a candidate to let the people know where he stands.

A speaker in a recent address on corruption in politics said the remedy is to teach patriotism and honesty in the homes and the public schools. It is also possible to teach emphatic lessons in the polls, as has been demonstrated time and again.

The "chain prayer" foolishness has been started again, and it does not come to a speedy end. It will prove that the person who started it is not the only fool in the world.

The mayor of Chicago gives notice to the liquor dealers of the city that the law will be strictly enforced on New Year's eve. Now will the "home rulers" hold another parade?

CURRENT OPINION

Foreign Born Population Must Adopt American Standard of Living.

The foreign born population must talk the language of the native born citizens. It must possess American citizenship and American ideas. It must stand firm by its source of allegiance in word and deed and must show that in very fact it has renounced allegiance to every prince, potentate or foreign government. It must be maintained on an American standard of living so as to prevent labor disturbances in important plants and at critical times. None of these objects can be secured as long as we have immigrant colonies, ghettos and immigrant sections, and, above all, they cannot be assured so long as we consider the immigrant only as an industrial asset.

I am certain that the only permanently safe attitude for this country as regards national preparedness for self defense is along the lines of universal service on the Swiss model.

Switzerland is the most democratic of nations. Its army is the most democratic army in the world. There isn't a touch of militarism or aggressiveness about Switzerland.

It has been found as a matter of actual practical experience in Switzerland that the universal military training has made a very marked increase in social efficiency and in the ability of the man thus trained to do well for himself in industry. —By Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

PRESIDENT INVITES GALLINGER

Wants Him to Discuss the Army Defense Plans.

Washington, Nov. 20.—President Wilson today asked Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, Republican leaders of the senate and house respectively to confer with him before the opening of the congress on legislation for national defense. The time of the conference will be arranged to suit the two leaders.

The President sent the invitations in accordance with his announced plans of making the fight for military preparedness along non-partisan lines. He expects that his plans will be opposed by some Democrats but has been assured by leaders that there is no doubt of passage of the main issues.

Just before the opening of Congress the President will confer with Republican members of the senate and house military and naval committees. When he sees Senator Gallinger and Representative Mann, the President will discuss the other legislative questions.

While it was being made known at the White House that the Republican leaders had been invited to a conference, Representative Mann who was at the state department asking for protection of American planters who have been driven out of Mexico made a statement on the President's proposal.

"The President may give the orders to the Democrats in Congress," he said, "but he certainly cannot call me to the White House to give orders. I am perfectly willing to be consulted with but not to go there to be told to do what he has decided upon. Everybody is for preparedness of course, but I am not willing to say what attitude the Republicans in the house will take towards the administration's defense program until I know just what it is from the documents, not from the newspapers. I am for all defense preparation that is necessary. I believe in treating such an issue as a non-partisan question."

I WONDER

If all those on the waiting list at the munition plant will land jobs as watchmen?

If that Ward 4 man will insist on being the Republican candidate for the board of public works?

If the Boston and Maine is going to give the old Portsmouth and Kittery bridge and serious consideration now?

Who is due for the first joy-ride in the new police auto that went in commission today?

Why some of the nearby towns don't engage the several able young teachers who graduated from the local training school and who are on the waiting list?

If the Democrat from Ward 3 who has been prominent in city and state politics will throw his hat in the ring for mayor?

What the Portsmouth hospital has waited so long for that much needed X-ray?

If the crew of the U. S. S. Eagle will go brook in New York before landing here?

SAFETY AND QUALITY FIRST

Here is a show that we think is the best ever. The acts are so well know in the vaudeville world that they hardly need any introduction.

It does not take a great amount of space to tell about the offerings at the Colonial. They speak for themselves. The thousands of patrons do the advertising.

This is the program for today. Quality first, remember. There is something on this bill that will just capture every woman and child in Portsmouth. Look it over.

VAUDEVILLE

WARREN & BROCKWAY—White and black faced comedians. An act that is good enough to play B. F. Keith's New York Palace Theatre and all the big city time. It is full of laughter.

PETE GRIFFIN—Known by all the vaudeville lovers. He is a favorite. He appears for fun purposes only. Singing, talking and dancing.

DIVING GIRLS THE BIG ACT AT THE COLONIAL

ROSE PITONOFF AND COMPANY
PLAYING AT THE COLONIAL
THEATRE FOR THREE DAYS

Rose Pitonoff, who has been heralded as the champion swimmer of her sex, with her company of swimming and diving girls, arrived in Portsmouth last evening, and will appear for the first three days of the week as the main attraction at the Colonial Theatre in a novelty act. Miss Pitonoff came into prominence several years ago through a wonderful swim made by her in Boston Harbor. At that time Miss Kellerman was considered the greatest woman swimmer in the world and Miss Pitonoff, coming practically unknown into the field, had hard opposition to win the place she now holds.

The big tank used in the act was set in place last evening and everything is ready for the opening of the act at this afternoon's performance. The tank is of glass and all sorts of swimming strokes and fancy diving will be done on the stage, an arrangement of mirrors above giving the audience a full view of every move made in the water.

For two years after her debut, Miss Pitonoff was the sensation of the vaudeville world, playing the Keith circuit for forty weeks without a break. Her act is now even better than when she opened two and a half years ago and she has been the headline attraction at all of the big houses since she went on the road.

There are two other big time acts playing on the bill for the first half of the week. Warren and Brockway, white and black face comedians, have been playing the big time, and were one of the greatest successes while playing at the B. F. Keith Palace Theatre in New York city.

Pete Griffin has been in Portsmouth many times in big productions and is playing alone now, bringing to Portsmouth a line of the best of laughter-producing comedy. He can sing, dance and talk, and is a master at all of these methods of entertainment.

The management of this theatre is continuing to secure only the best of vaudeville, and by booking the big acts far ahead is succeeding in presenting only acts of quality.

Miss Gladys Philbrick of Columbia street was the guest of friends in Kittery on Sunday.

PORTSMOUTH HIGH THE STATE CHAMPIONS

Take Hard-Fought Battle From Concord High School Saturday Afternoon by a Score of 10 to 2-Other Games

By defeating Concord high school at football Saturday afternoon in a fast game played at the South Play ground, Portsmouth high has won the New Hampshire State Championship. Portsmouth high school won its victory through its superior playing qualities and hard fighting as the visitors have had as much experience and somewhat out-weight the home team.

At the first of the season Portsmouth high was sadly lacking in the kicking department, but that they have finally overcome that defect is now assured. Ted Butler making a pretty drop kick from the field for a goal. The kick was long and difficult and was one of the features of the game.

As in all of the games this season, Portsmouth proved to be a consistent ground gainer through its line plungers. Davis, Mulholland and Snow were sent against the Concord line time and time again, their interference slipping big holes for them and long distances resulting. Currier, Craig, Mulholland and Davis featured in the game and there was not a man in the line who could be criticized for lack of fighting qualities or hard work. Portsmouth's victory was well deserved, and Concord has no need to feel ashamed of their defeat. They played a hard, consistent, steady game, but the better team won. For the visitors Gordon, Parsons, Nelson, Nute and Donovan excelled. The summary:

PRESIDENT NICHOLS LEAVES DARTMOUTH

Resigns to Take Up Work in Psychic Researches at Yale.

The resignation of Ernest Fox Nichols, tenth president of Dartmouth College, was presented to the board of trustees at a special meeting held in Boston on Friday, November 13, and was reluctantly accepted. President Nichols will return to the work in which he had won the highest distinction before assuming the presidency of Dartmouth, namely, research in the domain of physical science, a chair in which subject has been tendered him by Yale University.

President Nichols was born in Leavenworth, Kansas, June 1, 1869. He graduated from the Kansas Agricultural college and later pursued advanced studies at Cornell and the University of Berlin and of Cambridge. After six years as professor of physics at Cornell University, he was in 1898 called to the Chair of Physics at Dartmouth. Unusual eminence gained in research led to a call to Columbia in 1903. Upon the resignation of William Jewett Tucker from the presidency of Dartmouth in 1909, Doctor Nichols was called as president to the institution which six years before he had served as professor.

His letter of resignation handed on Friday to the trustees is as follows:

To the Honorable Trustees of Dartmouth College:

Gentlemen: Herewith I tender you my resignation of the presidency of the college, to take effect June 30, 1910, and I pray you to accept it.

Six and a half years ago when you did me the honor to call me to the present office, the college was passing through a critical period, and in heeding your call I reluctantly left the work of a teacher and student of physics, which for twenty years had fully occupied my time, my mind, my enthusiasm and had gratified my very ambition.

The college needs of that earlier time have been largely met, and through the cooperation and united efforts of many devoted fellow workers, the college is now in an exceptionally strong position, both in its internal organization and its external relations. There seems therefore, no compelling reason why I may not ask you to let me back to my earlier work, the duties and recompenses of which are in fuller accord with my individual tastes and preference. For this return an invitation to a chair of physics in Yale college affords me the acceptable opportunity.

Yet in leaving the official service of the college, as in coming to it, I hold its vital interests above my personal wishes. The duties of my office I have found exalting, and its high responsibilities, much as you have done to lighten them, a heavy burden. Looking forward to the many active years lying before a man of my age, I seriously doubt my endurance to hold through to the end to give the college that vigorous and efficient service which its continued welfare requires of its President. Moreover I feel a growing conviction that the best work in me to do for the college is already done.

You who already know it, I need not tell how precious to me have been the personal associations and friendships with the members of your own body, past and present, with my colleagues on the faculty and the administration; nor need I speak of the loyal friendship and fine support I have had from graduates and undergraduates alike, relations which from their warmth and heartiness have cheered and lightened my labors and given them whatever value they have possessed.

The duties of my office I shall surrender gladly. With the priceless human associations it has brought me I trust and pray I may never have to part.

With affectionate respect and regard,

Sincerely,
(Signed) Ernest Fox Nichols.

The resignation was accepted by the trustees in these terms:

Boston, Mass., Nov. 13, 1910.

Ernest Fox Nichols, D. Sc., LL. D., President of Dartmouth College.

Dear Mr. President:

It is with the greatest reluctance, that we, the trustees of Dartmouth College, accept your resignation of the presidency of the college, to take effect at the close of your seventh year of service.

Since you undertook the exacting duties of your office, you have given your self loyalty and without stint to their fulfillment. In difficult processes of readjustment you have brought to bear a high order of administrative ability enriched with a large tolerance, an exhaustive patience, a noble dignity and generosity.

You brought to your task at Dartmouth trained power of analysis, coupled with the loftiest ideal of scholarship. You have thus built up in the college an educational and administrative organization adequate and harmonious. Your impress upon the student body has been in terms of wider conceptions of intellectuality.

my inquiries her answers were very brief. There was no cheerfulness on her part at that time and there was not the look of interest in her eyes that one usually sees.

I next saw her in March when there was a marked change in her appearance. She requested that I call again. I remember. She asked me to call the next week as she had something very important to tell me. When I called she asked me if I knew what she was there for. I told her I had read the papers.

She said she wished to end her life and had prepared the bottle. Her husband was a hard drinker and that was not all.

Eliza Clark of Nottingham testified that Mr. Burns never came to her house or that she never met him.

Charles Hall testified that he never saw Burns at the Clark house.

At 11.10 Mrs. Burns took the witness stand in her own behalf. She was assisted to the stand by her counsel, Col. John H. Bartlett and told the story in a low but clear tone of voice. She detailed at length her early history. Her marriage with Burns in Boston and their living in Boston, Webster, New York and other places. She told of her going to Laconia early in December and that while there Anna Neal told her of somebody taking cyanide of potassium to end their life. She was blue and despondent and made up her mind to do the same thing. She described her visits to the Laconia druggists with the view of purchasing the poison and the subsequent purchase of the deadly drug in Manchester.

She then detailed her movements upon her arrival in Nottingham, the Saturday before Burns' death.

I did not go to Myra's as my husband couldn't go there and so I did not want to. I went to a Mrs. Gillet for a room but was refused. I went to Mrs. Walker's and she said I could have a room until Monday. She said she could not give me my meals. I first met my husband that night in front of Mrs. Hall's place. He put his arms around my neck, kissed me and said, I am glad to see you little girl. He took my hand and we went down to the store. He came down after supper. We had no fire. We went to bed quite early. Prior to telling I sat on his knee as I always did.

At this point of her narrative Mrs. Burns collapsed and court took a recess.

At 12 o'clock court reconvened and

"Let the GOLD DUST work for you"

One reason for the great popularity of Gold Dust is its activity.

It dissolves quickly in hot or cold water, and purifies in addition to cleaning.

Witnesses called at the afternoon session by the defense to prove that Mrs. Burns was not sane, described her as a wild eyed, irrational woman, who invariably skinned along the roads about Nottingham by day and night at a rate never a run than a walk. Ralph Gile of Nottingham said "During the summer of 1914 while I was at work on the state roads I often saw Mrs. Burns hurrying along the road, almost at a run, never walking. I never talked with her, but I called her 'crazy Mary' like the rest of the family."

Mrs. Smith Harry Davis, formerly Miss Margaretta Sadler of Dedham, Mass., collapsed on the witness stand late in the afternoon, when she testified that Louis DeMerritt, husband of Myra, who testified against her sister Mary, had insulted her.

"Did her husband make improper advances?" asked Colonel John H. Bartlett, in indirect examination.

Deputy Sheriffs rushed to her and while they worked to calm her, Mrs. Burns and her mother, Mrs. Aurilla Davis, wept with bowed heads. Mrs. Davis was able to resume in a short time.

A little later Mrs. Fred Gove rushed from the courtroom, followed by Deputy Sheriff Wilbur J. Shaw. He caught her just as she was falling to the floor in the counsel's room. She was unconscious nearly five minutes, and recovered only after restoratives had been used repeatedly. Most of the witnesses and jurymen are showing signs of fatigue, and the respondent and her mother have aged visibly during the five days the trial has been in progress.

she resumed her story. In answer to the question, "What did you mix the cyanide in," she replied, "In the gin bottle."

Q—What became of the poison bottle?

A—I threw it down the toilet. Mrs. Burns then went on to relate what took place during the remainder of Sunday.

He took me in his lap and said he would leave Nottingham and go to Laconia and we would live together and by and by—

I told him he was the only man I ever cared for and I would kill myself rather than live without him.

After he told me we would live together again, I felt better. Although he drank a good deal he was always good to me.

We had decided to go back to Laconia and planned to take the afternoon train the following day.

On the following evening he asked me for $10 to pay some bills and I gave him $5 to get some gloves. He was gone only a short time. I asked him if he had been up to Mr. Wyman's and he said he had, but didn't spend the money. He took the bill out and laid it on the table.

We went to bed before eight o'clock. Everything was friendly; we talked and I think he said it was 11.30 when he blew the light out. He had something to drink. I think he drank once or twice during the night.

He woke me up early in the morning. He said he was not feeling well and said he wished he did not have to work. I said, don't work.

I turned over and went to dozing. The next I knew he came and sat down on the bed. He said, Oh Mary!

At this point Mrs. Burns again collapsed and a recess was taken until 1.15 this afternoon.

The members of the jury, accompanied by deputies John E. Cram, D. N. Tilton and Frank O. Tilton were taken on an auto ride Sunday morning, making a trip to Newburyport and Haverhill, returning by way of Merrimack, Amesbury, Salisbury, Hampton and Rye Beaches, arriving at the hotel at noon. Three automobiles were used and the jurors returned just as a heavy downpour of rain began.

Saturday's session was marked by the collapse of four of the women connected with the case. Mrs. Margaretta Davis, wife of Smith Harry Davis, brother of the defendant, was overcome while on the stand while testifying to an insult made to her by Lewis DeMerritt, husband of Elmina. She was unable to proceed for several moments. Mrs. Burns and her mother, Mrs. Davis, were also overcome at this time weeping bitterly, and Mrs. Gove rushed from the court room and was taken care of in one of the counsel rooms.

Witnesses called at the afternoon session by the defense to prove that Mrs. Burns was not sane, described her as a wild eyed, irrational woman, who invariably skinned along the roads about Nottingham by day and night at a rate never a run than a walk. Ralph Gile of Nottingham said "During the summer of 1914 while I was at work on the state roads I often saw Mrs. Burns hurrying along the road, almost at a run, never walking. I never talked with her, but I called her 'crazy Mary' like the rest of the family."

Mrs. Smith Harry Davis, formerly Miss Margaretta Sadler of Dedham, Mass., collapsed on the witness stand late in the afternoon, when she testified that Louis DeMerritt, husband of Myra, who testified against her sister Mary, had insulted her.

"Did her husband make improper advances?" asked Colonel John H. Bartlett, in indirect examination.

"Yes."

"That was Louis DeMerritt?"

"Yes sir," responded the witness, then with a gasp leaned her head on the rail before her and sobbed violently.

Deputy Sheriffs rushed to her and while they worked to calm her, Mrs. Burns and her mother, Mrs. Aurilla Davis, wept with bowed heads. Mrs. Davis was able to resume in a short time.

A little later Mrs. Fred Gove rushed from the courtroom, followed by Deputy Sheriff Wilbur J. Shaw. He caught her just as she was falling to the floor in the counsel's room. She was unconscious nearly five minutes, and recovered only after restoratives had been used repeatedly. Most of the witnesses and jurymen are showing signs of fatigue, and the respondent and her mother have aged visibly during the five days the trial has been in progress.

Thought Her Irrational

"Mrs. Burns, a stranger to me, rushed up to my house one morning," declared Mrs. Lydia A. Plant of Nottingham Centre, "and said I was after her husband. He had come up to the piazza that morning to talk business with my husband, but I didn't know him. I told her I never saw the man before. I didn't want her husband or anyone else's. I've got one of my own. Then she said she thought she'd come and see for herself and must now investigate another house. Her eyes were awfully wild and her face as white as snow. I should say she was irrational."

Mrs. Harry Davis in the morning session had testified that Mary made an attempt to grab some carbolic acid in the Davis home one day, after she had declared, "You will never see me again. I care more for him than for my own life."

In the afternoon, she declared she had lost a necklace and it was known who took it.

"Did you tell Myra that Mary had suggested getting a warrant for Myra?" asked Attorney Ernest L. Gupitt, in cross examination.

"No, but Mary told me Myra took it," answered the witness. "Myra told stories about me and her husband insulted me. Mary never told me Burns was untrue to her. Myra testified that Mary was sane, but she told me once that she thought 'Mary was crazy.'"

Testifies to Strychnine Sale

Alfred D. Bergeron, a druggist Newmarket, testified that June 18, 1907 he sold strychnine to Mrs. Emma Currier. Fred P. Cummings, town clerk of Lee, produced records to show that Emma died the next day. Roy E. Webb, town clerk of Nottingham, showed that Dec. 23, 1907, a few months after her sister's death, Etta Davis married the widower, John Currier. Etta was then 14 years old.

Elise C. Armstrong, nurse in the New Hampshire State Hospital, said she found Mrs. Burns lying on a floor one night weeping bitterly while she was confined there for observation. Ice caps were placed on her head, but she didn't know why. Mrs. Helen Giles of Nottingham said she had seen Mrs. Burns run by her home in the summer of 1914, and that she tried to hire a room shortly before Burns' death, but was refused because of what she believed her irrational condition. She had heard that Mrs. Burns was jealous of her husband.

"She walked like a race horse and I thought her insane," testified Mrs. John Gile, from whom Mrs. Burns tried to hire a rig to drive to Raymond just before Burns died.

"When I told her where she could get a rig she went directly the opposite way."

Perley B. Batchelder of Nottingham said that Mrs. Burns walked past his horse one day while the horse was travelling at a rapid pace. Mrs. Grace B. Dudley of Lee testified to conditions surrounding the death by suicide of Mrs. Emma Currier.

Father's Mind Not Right

Smith Harry Davis, brother of the accused woman, said that he is a signal light tender on the road. He said his mother left his father several months before the latter hanged himself. There were times when his father's mind was not all right.

"Either Myra or her husband had my father arrested once for driving up into their dooryard. Myra and father didn't speak for a time. The Sunday before Burns died Myra acted very silly with him at our home. She kissed him most of the time, sat in his lap and would get up and rush out. She did not seem right at my house. I heard Mary some time before that, speak of suicide at my house. She didn't think Frank was doing right by her when she was treating him so well. I never saw Frank with other women."

Davis testified that he and his brother Frank drove to Myra DeMerritt's home and asked her to visit her sister in the Rockingham county jail.

"No," she said, according to Davis. "I don't care to and you'd better not go either."

Davis said he had seen his sister 12 or 15 times since she has been in jail, and that he believed her insane at times for two years. She was tired out, sick, blue and discouraged.

"I saw her in jail," he testified, "and the second time she told me she bought the stuff to take herself. She said she put it in her handbag and he got hold of it by accident. She said she changed her mind about taking it. She said she hadn't the courage at the last minute."

"Did you know Bert Manley?" asked Attorney Gupitt.

"I never heard of him until the other day," said Davis.

CATHOLIC NOTES

The work of taking the parish census for the past week by the pastor and his assistant has progressed with much satisfaction. This week the official enumeration of the parishioners will be taken between the junction of Bridge street and the Plains district. The outcome of the registration is awaited with much interest by the people from the fact that the previous record was taken fifteen years ago.

The attendance at the Sunday school shows a substantial increase during the past two months and at the present time the school has an enrollment of nearly 600 pupils. The interest and the increase is very gratifying to the pastor and teachers, which shows that the recent appeal made to the parents is bearing good fruit.

The senior choir of the church will shortly begin active rehearsals on the musical program to be rendered on Christmas Day.

Two weddings will be solemnized during the coming week, the first on Tuesday and the second on Wednesday.

Needed repairs are under way on the brick structure of the spire.

IMPORTANT HONOR

As a result of the freshman trials which have been held by the Dramatic Association of Dartmouth college, twenty-one men have been admitted to the association. Among the number is Donald L. Finlayson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Finlayson of Rye. This is considered a very important honor.

TENNESSEE THE WINNERS

On Saturday the U. S. S. Tennessee football team defeated the eleven of the U. S. detention ship Southern by a score of 35 to 17. The game was witnessed by a large crowd.

DEMOCRATS ARE GETTING BUSY ON CAMPAIGN

The Democratic city committee has begun to interest themselves in the coming municipal campaign and are feeling out the men of the party as to candidates for mayor and councilmen. The committee recently got together for a conference but not much can be learned from any of the members as to what was done.

The chairman of each ward committee made a report of what was going on in their respective wards, etc., but no real action was taken.

Though Dr. Samuel Ladd who headed the ticket at the last election has strongly announced himself as being out of the contest some of the party leaders are trying to prevail upon him to reconsider his declaration and be the nominee again in December. The doctor may change his mind, but it doesn't look that way at present. Should he insist on staying out of the fight, the party is going to look to four others, namely: Former Mayor D. W. Bauger, James W. Burgett, John G. Parsons and Fred E. Hasty.

AUTO PATROL DRIVER ON DUTY

Christopher Smart, Jr., Begins Duties as Police Officer.

Christopher Smart, Jr., began his duties with the police department at noon today. Officer Smart will act as driver of the new patrol wagon and also do regular police work.

His present hours will be from 12 noon to 12 midnight and he will remain about the police station and have charge of the garage. In all probability Deputy Ducker will also learn to run the auto, so that in case they need it during the forenoon, he can run it.

Officer Smart goes on the force with the best wishes of a large number of friends, who are certain that he will make good.

He is the son of Christopher Smart, a native of this city and is married.

The "bird" is all right for "inside wear" for the boy, but for the "outside" he'll want for Thanksgiving day one of our smart styled Mackinaw Coats, if he hasn't one already. 'Tis the ideal coat for the youngsters as it is an ideal "sport" coat. We've lots of them here now in bright, seasonable colorings and smart patterns at $4.00 and $5.00
